“We are at a nuclear tipping point, and the actions being taken are not adequate to the threat.”

ABOUT THE FILM

Nuclear Tipping Point is a conversation with four men intimately involved in American diplomacy and national security over the last four decades.

Former secretary of state George Shultz, former secretary of state Henry Kissinger, former secretary of defense Bill Perry, and former senator Sam Nunn share the personal experiences that led them to write two Wall Street Journal op-eds in support of a world free of nuclear weapons and the steps needed to get there. Their efforts reframed the global debate on nuclear issues and, according to the New York Times, "sent waves through the global policy establishment."

The film is introduced by General Colin Powell, narrated by actor Michael Douglas, and includes interviews with Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger and former Soviet president Mikhail Gorbachev.

Nuclear Tipping Point was written and directed by Ben Goddard and produced by the Nuclear Security Project to raise awareness about nuclear threats and to help build support for the urgent actions needed to reduce nuclear dangers. The project is coordinated by the Nuclear Threat Initiative, in cooperation with the Hoover Institution at Stanford University.

ABOUT THE NUCLEAR THREAT INITIATIVE

The Nuclear Threat Initiative is a charitable organization working to reduce the global threats from nuclear, biological, and chemical weapons. NTI is co-chaired by philanthropist Ted Turner and former Senator Sam Nunn.

ABOUT THE HOOVER INSTITUTION

The Hoover Institution on War, Revolution and Peace at Stanford University is a public policy research center devoted to the advanced study of politics, economics, and political economy—both domestic and foreign—as well as international affairs.
